SERIES IV. THE DEPARTMENT OF WAR

NO. 20. MASSACHUSETTS

Boston, Massachusetts
The National Archives Project
1939

PREFACE

The Inventory of Federal Archives in the States is one of the products of the work of the Survey of Federal Archives, which operated as a nation-wide project of the Works Progress Administration from January 1, 1936 to June 30, 1937, and has been continued in Massachusetts since that date as a state project of that Administration.

The plan for the organization of the Inventory is as follows: Series I consists of reports on the Administration of the Survey, acknowledgments, and general discussions of the location, condition, and content of federal archives in the states. Succeeding series contain the detailed information secured by workers of the Survey, in inventory form, a separate series number being assigned to each of the executive departments (except the Department of State) and other major units of the Federal Government. Within each series No. 1 is a general introduction to the field organization and records of the governmental agency concerned; the succeeding numbers contain the inventory proper, separate numbers being assigned to each state in alphabetical order. Thus, in each series, the inventory for Alabama is No. 2, that for Arizona No. 3, that for Arkansas No. 4, etc.

For each local office information regarding each series, or unit of related records, is presented in the following order: title, inclusive dates ("to date" indicating an open file at the time the information was secured), general description of informational content, description of the system of filing or indexing (if any), a statement of frequency and purpose of use, form of the record itself (bound volumes, sheets in folders, etc.), linear footage, description of the containers, physical condition of the records (not stated if satisfactory), location by room number or other identifying information, and finally, the number of the Form 58SA on which this information was originally recorded by a Survey worker and from which it was abstracted for the Inventory. This form is on file in The National Archives. When it contains substantial information on addenda sheets which has not been included in the mimeographed abstract, indication of this is given by use of the reference "See addenda".

In Massachusetts the work of the Survey has been under the direction of Mr. J. W. McElroy. This Inventory of the records of the Department of War in Massachusetts was prepared in the Boston office of the Survey and was edited before final typing by Mr. Henry Beers of the Washington office.

BOSTON QUARTERMASTER DEPOT Army Base Bldg., 666 Summer St.

This branch depot has been in operation since Civil War times. It has occupied various quarters in Boston and vicinity and just prior to its establishment at the Army Base was located in the Ford Plant on Memorial Drive and the Boston Elevated Building, on Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge. Upon the entrance of the United States into the World War, or soon thereafter, the necessity for larger and better quarters for the Boston Quartermaster Depot in particular and greater storage facilities in Boston for the accommodation of the War Department in general was realized. A large tract of land, about sixty acres situated on the waterfront in South Boston, was then acquired by the United States from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. This tract of land is commonly known as the Army Base, and is numbered 666 Summer Street. The buildings at the Army Base, were constructed in the years 1918 and 1919 and immediately upon their completion this depot moved its offices into Section F of the largest building at the Army Base, known as the Army Base Building.

The activities of this depot primarily cover the First Corps Area, and also extend beyond the same as its Washington headquarters directs. Although this depot is located within the First Corps Area, it does not come under the direct jurisdiction of its headquarters. It is an independent or exempted station and functions directly under the Quartermaster General of the War Department. The management of the Army Base area and its buildings come within its control.

The Army Base is under military supervision and surveillance. All records at this base both military and civil are carefully kept and are inaccessible to unauthorized persons. Records of this depot, except those destroyed by express authorization of its Washington headquarters, have been carefully preserved. Its active records are to be found in the west room, 2d floor, section F of the Army Base Building, and its inactive ones in the west room, 8th floor, section D of the same building. All its records are well kept, well arranged, and, except for certain of its inactive records, easily accessible. Many of its inactive records are boxed up with covers nailed down; and descriptions of these records are based upon labels on the boxes and information supplied by the Chief Clerk of this agency.

DISTRICT ENGINEER

Custom House, India and State Sts.

This agency was established locally in 1825, but for the first seventy years of its existence the exact location of its various quarters around Boston cannot be ascertained. In 1895, records show that its offices were in the Winthrop Building, Summer Street, where they remained until 1903. From the latter year to 1919, the agency was quartered in Barristers' Hall, Pemberton Square, when the final move was made to its present quarters in the Custom House.

The agency's jurisdiction today extends over the greater part of New England, from the elbow on Cape Cod (Buzzards Bay), Massachusetts, to the Canadian border which includes areas formerly administered by other offices. An Engineer Office of the War Department, located at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, for instance, originally had jurisdiction over the area between Portland, Maine, and Lynn, Massachusetts, from 1899 to 1903; and prior to 1920, another Engineer Office of the War Department had jurisdiction over the State of Maine, except such portions thereof as were taken over at various times by the Boston and Portsmouth Engineer offices.

The Boston office has supervision over all structures built by states, cities, and towns, or private parties in or over the navigable waters of the United States within the New England area. In addition, the engineer has charge of all river and harbor improvements; other emergency river and harbor work; and the construction and maintenance of sea walls, forts, etc., in his district. The agency also carries on special studies of power, hydraulics, flood control, breakwaters, and the like, in the territory for which it has responsibility.

All records of the New Hampshire (Portsmouth) district were transferred when Boston took over jurisdiction of that office in 1903; and in 1920, Boston also took over the jurisdiction and the records of the Portland, Maine, office, which has since that time continued in operation only as a suboffice.

Owing to the facts (a) that the jurisdiction of these three offices at one time or another apparently overlapped; and, (b) that frequent moves have been made during the past several years; and, (c) that inadequate storage conditions prevailed generally in each location; most noncurrent records of all three district offices mentioned are now hopelessly confused and intermingled as regards their respective offices of origin.

Recent efforts have been made by the present staff and survey workers to restore some semblance of order to these inactive archives in the custody of the district Engineer's office. All records used in the conduct of current business of the office are maintained in modern equipment and free from every hazard.

All records surveyed in the Boston district Engineer office have been classified in the inventory according to the state or states they concern, irrespective of the office from which they may have ~~originated~~. Records which obviously concern the individual states of Maine, Massachusetts, or New Hampshire are respectively so classified; while those affecting two or more of these or any other state are classified under "Miscellaneous States".

(B) Army Base Bldg.

By General Order No. 38 of the War Department, dated April 2, 1917, the Headquarters of the Northeastern Department was established; and by General Order No. 50 of the War Department, dated August 20, 1920, the designation of this agency was changed to Headquarters First Corps Area. The area of its jurisdiction comprises all of the New England states and Fort H.G. Wright, New York. From May 1, 1917 to the fall of that year it occupied quarters in the building known as Nottingham Chambers located on Huntington Avenue, Boston. From the fall of 1917 to the summer of 1920, it occupied quarters at 99 Chauncy St., Boston; and then it was moved to its present location at the Army Base, Boston. At the present time it occupies, except for a few rooms in the basement, all the Administration Building and the west rooms of section F on the 3d, 4th, and 6th floors of the Army Base Building. All records of this unit and those in its custody have, so far as ascertainable, been carefully preserved, none have been lost or destroyed, and but few sent to Washington upon express request. All records are kept in good condition, well arranged, easily accessible, and well protected against loss by fire or other hazard. At the present time the active records of this headquarters are located throughout the rooms of the Administration Building and in the west rooms, 3d and 6th floors, section F of the Army Base Building; and its inactive ones in the west room, 4th floor, section F, of the same building. The Bridgeport Ordnance District, whose records are stored in the Springfield Armory, was one of a number established during the World War. Because of the magnitude of the task, the importance of speed, and the difficulty of central administration, thirteen ordnance districts were established by the Ordnance Department for the production of munitions. Under the direction of the Production Division, of which Colonel Guy E. Tripp was head, decentralization was begun in the spring of 1918. In June, the various production managers, who were civilians rather than military officers, were made Ordnance district chiefs. The organization centered around them resembled that of the Ordnance Department at Washington, which exercised general control of all the districts. The district chiefs managed business between the Ordnance Department and the manufacturers engaged in producing munitions for the Government. Decentralization began in June 1918 with eleven districts, but St. Louis was added in July, and Baltimore in November. Definite state limits were assigned to the districts, which specialized in the products ordinarily manufactured in those areas. The districts were located at Baltimore, Boston, Bridgeport, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Rochester, St. Louis, and Toronto.

In November 1918, following the Armistice, an Ordnance Claims Board was created to settle all claims arising under the suspension or cancellation of contracts executed by the Ordnance Department. District Claims Boards were established on December 14, 1918 in all the Ordnance districts and at Rock Island, Frankford, Watertown, Springfield, and Picatinny Arsenals, and at the Nitrate Division.

When claims filed with the district boards were investigated, and agreements reached between the contractors and the board, they were forwarded to the Ordnance Claims Board at Washington for review and final approval. Upon approval, the claims were returned to the district board, and in due course delivered to the contractors and final settlements made by the Finance Division.

The task of disposing of manufacturing materials, equipment, and buildings, which had become the property of the Government, was given to the Ordnance Salvage Board, created on November 19, 1918. District Salvage Boards were established in each of the thirteen district Ordnance offices.

These were the operating and selling organizations. Surplus property was disposed of in the following ways: (a) retained by the Ordnance Department for use in manufacture; (b) transfer to some other Government agency; (c) arrangements for marketing through the producers; (d) sales in the public market; (e) sold to educational institutions; (f) sold to foreign governments.

When the War Department Claims Board was established, on January 20, 1919, the District Claims Boards were no longer under the jurisdiction of the Ordnance Department. The War Department Claims Board was established with authority "to supervise and coordinate the work of the various War Department agencies engaged in the settlement of claims resulting from the termination of contracts or other procurement obligations of the department consequent upon the suspension of hostilities, and to authorize and approve such settlements." The negotiation of settlements was carried on in forty-two districts or zone boards created at business centers throughout the country. As the claims were settled, a gradual reduction of these district boards occurred until November 1920 when only the War Department Claims Board remained. Decreased activity on the part of the claims board at the district office resulted on April 6, 1920 in the separation of the claims boards from the district offices. At that time, the chairmen of the district salvage boards were made commanding officers of the districts. Inasmuch as the operations of the salvage board depended upon the progress made by the claims board, it was not until March 1919 that sales were made to any considerable extent.

WATERTOWN

WATERTOWN ARSENAL

The Watertown Arsenal is situated on the north bank of the Charles River in Middlesex County, Massachusetts, on the boundary line between the westerly border of the City of Boston and the easterly border of the Town of Watertown. It was established by the President in 1816 in accordance with Section II, Act of Congress, approved April 20, 1808.

Previously, however, there had been, at Charlestown, Massachusetts, a United States Arsenal designed to meet the requirements of a depot for ordnance supplies in the New England States. This arsenal, established by the President in 1800 under authority granted him by Section I, Act of Congress, approved April 2, 1794, may be regarded as a forerunner of the present Watertown Arsenal.

When the President decided, in 1816, to establish an arsenal on the banks of the Charles River, the present site selected, and about forty acres of land was purchased by the United States and the work of erecting the buildings began. On or about the first of December 1819, the arsenal was transferred from Charlestown to Watertown. Additional land was acquired at various times, and today the arsenal covers an area of some ninety-four acres.

Watertown Arsenal was established for the manufacture of field, siege, and seacoast artillery carriages, accessories for artillery material, and as a depot for the storage and issue of ordnance supplies.

The Civil War had the effect of greatly increasing the importance and volume of the operations at the arsenal, several additional buildings having been erected during Civil War times.

At the outbreak of the World War the facilities at the arsenal were greatly enlarged; ten large buildings were added.

All buildings which contain records are definitely designated by name and number as follows:

- (131) Administration Bldg.

WATERTOWN ARSENAL (STORAGE RECORDS) (OLD) BOSTON ORDNANCE DISTRICT

The (Old) Boston Ordnance District was created about March 1, 1917. Headquarters was established at 19 Portland Street, Boston, Mass., where it remained until 1921. In 1921, it was transferred to the Watertown Arsenal, and its personnel placed under the authority of the administrative division. Its functions were to design, procure, store, supply, test, inspect, and maintain ordnance materials and supplies. During 1922, the (Old) Boston Ordnance District was disbanded. Thereafter, and until 1927, the administrative division of the Watertown Arsenal completed the duties of the claims and salvage boards. For further details concerning the Ordnance Districts established during the World War, see the inventory for the Bridgeport Ordnance District under the heading for the Springfield Armory.

In August 1922, the new Boston Ordnance District was established at 200 Devonshire Street, Boston. Its function, distinct from the old agency, is to compile and maintain statistics on the potential productivity of manufacturing concerns in this locality.

Complete (Old) Boston Ordnance District records are exclusively stored on the second floor, section J, Bldg. 296, Watertown Arsenal. They are kept in various types of containers and are in good condition.
